The Monkey Gland.

F. P. HILBURN.

A farmer had an old gray mare
That would not stretch her traces,
A surgeon and a monkey gland,
And now she's in the races.
His cow would have a pint of milk
In her old flabby udder,
But since he used the monkey gland
She makes nine pounds of butter.
He used to have to feed his hogs
For every pound of bacon,
But since he's using monkey glands,
They climb the trees for acorns.
The story I must now relate,
Beats the tale of Jonah's gourd;
His son went out one morning,
And put one in his Ford.
And when the farmer went to town,
He almost lost command,
His fiver skipped and whirled around
And bucked to beat the band!
And he had to keep the brake on,
And shut off all the power,
And the trip that used to take a day
He made in half an hour.
And why the son kept laughing
He could not understand,
Until the son removed the hood
And showed the monkey gland.
Now since I wrote, you understand,
That farmer came to town,
And I have this at first hand,
And am free to write it down.
"For," holding up his horny hand,
He said, "you may tell the world
"If she had another monkey gland
"That fiver would catch a squirrel!"
And since I've written all this stuff,
I think—in fact, I know it,
If I'd have had a monkey gland,
I might have been a poet.
Trout, Louisiana.

Mr. Harding's Association.

(St. Louis Post-Dispatch.)

The background of fact to be recognized through the gropings of the Washington administration after a permanent organization to combat international misunderstanding, war and armament burdens is that the aspirations of the peoples of the world for a safeguarded peace will not be denied and that some end which satisfies that aspiration ultimately must be brought about.

Not all the argument in eternity can alter the needs that have been created by the world situation, nor, we believe, can any failure of governments to shoulder their share of the burden and to admit the moral obligations crush the now aroused aspiration of the peoples of the earth for a continually functioning concert of nations.

What immediate form that concert should take is but a matter of the expediences, of whether the nations shall go directly at the point of the matter with the least possible duplication of effort and the fewest of lapses and reactions that would cause delay, or whether they shall be slowly beaten into line by the logic of circumstance, by the laborious process of trial and success, by reactions and unnecessary wars and by impoverishments and letting of blood before all recognize that the only real victory for any nation is in the settlement of differences by organized justice.

President Wilson sought to lead the world to this end by the shortest route, by invoking intelligence to anticipate all the conceivable situations and conditions which which would lead to war. He was hampered by reactionary diplomacy in Europe. He was hampered by partisan obstruction in the United States Senate. His attempt was defeated, temporarily at least, in this country and thereby crippled for all the world. But his effort has borne fruit in a world aspiration and agitation which will not be placated without the continued effort of this and other governments to the same end.

Mr. Harding and his senatorial associates, failing of the world statesman's vision, at first sought to deny the logic which made imperative the organization of the world Powers for peace. Having made preliminary efforts, however, in answer to public demand, they are at last beginning to recognize the requirements of a situation which Mr. Wilson recognized long ago. But rather than lead the way, as Mr. Wilson sought to do, they themselves are being led by events. What Mr. Wilson sought to anticipate by intelligence they undertake by the age-old method of trial and success.

Whether approached by the Wilson method or the Harding method, the end is bound to be approximately the same, but there may be a vast difference in the number of years that it will take to arrive at that end. And for a loose association for convention of nations to undertake to set up similar machinery to perform tasks already being performed by the League of Nations seems unnecessarily to duplicate effort and to open the way to friction and delay.

The present arms conference may determine the fate of Mr. Harding's projected association. If the conference fall there can be no hope for the Association, since it would be but a continuance of the conference plan and principle. If the conference succeed, as is hoped, Mr. Harding's plan will have a basis from which to start.

In any event, the international consciousness, set aflame by Mr. Wilson's vision and labor, is here to stay. Whether we shall directly satisfy it or blunder about in the dark until we strike the only forward path is a point to be determined by our national intelligence and by the action of our statesman either in expressing that intelligence or thwarting it.

From Goodland.

November has gone and next comes the joyous Christmas time.

Most of our farmers are gathering corn.

A few loads of ties pass along the roads daily.

Mrs. Ida Brooks attended church last Sunday—the first time since her long illness.

Mayfield, the merchant, is still selling goods at the old stand.

George and Clifford Adams have engaged in sheep raising.

N. W. Adams is filling an order for baskets wanted in California.

Our good housewives are busy quilting and making sausage.

Melvin Akers is staying with his sister, Mrs. Chandler, at Viburnum.

Jiminy Akers is working for Botan Brooks, cutting logs.

Raymond Brooks and Mr. Craig made a trip to town lately.

J. S. Adams has returned from Kansas City for the winter.

Miss Lora Eaton is in Kansas City taking music.

Dr. Adams received the sad news of the death of his nephew, Norman Bay, at Viburnum on November 23d.

Paul, the sixteen-year-old son of Rev. A. J. Minor, died suddenly of heart failure on the 15th of November.

F. M. Adams and family made a business trip to our county seat recently.

Otis Adams and sons went to Iron-ton this week on business.

Little Lucille Brooks is quite ill at this writing.

The attendance at church on Sunday was small on account of the rain and high water. Rev. Henslee preached and Dr. Adams spoke to the young people on the subject of David and Goliath. Saul's weapons were not what David needed to do his own work.

Miss Ora Smith is attending the Oakdale Normal at Goodland.

Our school at Goodland is progressing nicely. Several pupils have not missed a day out of one hundred.

TIMOTHY HAY.

Goodwater Items.

We have had some heavy rains the past week.

Homer Crocker is now with home folk. He has been a soldier boy the past year, having been honorably discharged November 11th.

Several people have had "bad colds" lately.

The saw mills are doing a lot of work.

J. I. Carl now has his saw mill located at Dillard.

The boys have caught several 'possums this year.

Mrs. Martha Mayberry and Mrs. Lucy Wilhite went to Pilot Knob last week to visit relatives.

The effect of "white mule" is often in evidence.

Ruel Crocker and sister, Ruby, visited relatives at Graniteville last week.

Jesse Payne spent a few days recently in St. Louis.

L. W. S.

November 28th.

There is more Catarrh in this section of the country than all other diseases put together, and for years it was supposed to be incurable. Doctors prescribed local remedies, and by constantly failing to cure with local treatment, pronounced it incurable. Catarrh is a local disease, greatly influenced by constitutional conditions and therefore requires constitutional treatment. Hall's Catarrh Medicine, manufactured by F. J. Cheney & Co., Toledo, Ohio, is a constitutional remedy, is taken internally and acts thru the Blood on the Mucous Surfaces of the System. One Hundred Dollars reward is offered for any case that Hall's Catarrh Medicine fails to cure. Send for circulars and testimonials.

Job-work, all kinds, at this office.

Brule Notes.

We are having very gloomy weather with prospects of snow.

Thanksgiving passed off quietly. J. L. Crocker and A. White made a business trip to the West End last week.

Mrs. J. L. McClurg is visiting in St. Louis.

Miss Geneva Hatridge of Caledonia High School spent Saturday and Sunday with home folk.

F. M. Crocker has rented his farm to Gilbert Bennett. Mr. Crocker has moved his family to his saw mill in Reynolds county.

Miss Lilah Thompson has been on the sick list, but is improving. Miss Inez Miller is sick.

November 28. SNOW FLAKE.

William Honley Carl.

William Honley Carl was born in Tennessee, May 17, 1846; died at his home at Goodwater, Mo., November 28th, 1921, after a lingering illness of three years and six months, aged 75 years, 6 months and 9 days.

In 1875 Mr. Carl married Rebecca Ellen Corder, of Evansville, Indiana. Later they came to Missouri to make their home. To this union were born eleven children—seven boys and four girls, of which two boys and one girl died in infancy. The eight children who are now living to know the loss of father are: Otis, Ira, Claude, Roy, Ray, Mrs. Cora Lucas, Mrs. Lucie F. Hedley, Davisville, Mo., and Mrs. Jessie Bond, Trout, Louisiana. His beloved companion preceded him to the Great Beyond, March 1, 1918.

The deceased had lived at his late home at Goodwater for seventeen years, where he was engaged in farming. About two years ago he was converted while alone at home, and lived a faithful servant of God until his death. During his prolonged illness he often remarked to his children and friends that he had no dread of death, as he was ready to go any time.

His death came to us as a shock for he had seemed improved until Friday morning when he became suddenly worse while at the breakfast table, and passed away at 10 o'clock. He died an easy death.

X. Goodwater, Mo., Nov. 28th.

Shoes Worn by Chinese Women.

Many young Chinese women have adopted western shoes, but those who grew up in the days before foot binding was forbidden still wear the tiny, resplendently embroidered shoes that have no counterpart in all the world. Roughly, these shoes are of two types: one, which has a fair-sized heel made on the shoe for outdoor wear; and another, which has no heel, for indoor use. The latter, however, may be fitted with a loose heel held in position by tapes if the lady wishes to walk abroad.

Always Unpopular Number.

Whether unlucky or not, number 13 is thoroughly unpopular. If 13 sit down to a meal, the first to rise will die within a year, says superstition. The person born on the thirteenth of the month will be unlucky throughout life; no one should embark on a journey or start an enterprise on the thirteenth of the month; while the thirteenth house in a row is nearly always tenantless, or renumbered 11A or 15.

Meanest Man Alive.

The meanest man alive must be the restaurant proprietor at Bilbao, Spain, of whom the following is told: He lost a bag containing $1,850 in notes and gold and was in great despair. Presently the driver of the cab in which the bag had been left arrived, bringing the bag intact. The owner presented him with a ticket for a meal—not in his own restaurant, but at a charity soup kitchen.

Virtue of Cold Water.

We have read that if a man on the wrong side of fifty, getting out of cold water, finds the bathroom looking-glass fogged, he may continue his practice safely, knowing that it is beneficial; that there are some who when the water is only a little above freezing point find it necessary "to towel only their head and their feet, natural evaporation doing the rest."

How Ohio River Got Name.

The Allegheny and Ohio rivers were regarded by the French as one stream. The name given by them, La Belle Riviere (the beautiful river), is a translation of the Seneca term "Ho-he-yu," changed by the whites, both English and French, at a later date into Ohio.

Petroleum's Value to World.

It has been said that every possible necessity of a man's life, save the water he drinks and the air he breathes, may be supplied either directly or indirectly through the use of petroleum products, and even water may be pumped by a gasoline engine.

Baltic Revel.

In the Baltic countries the Eve of St. John is a festival that goes back further into time than the celebration of the day in honor of the saint whose name it bears, for St. John's day is also Midsummer day, and on that night over wide stretches of country it is the immemorial custom of peasants, gathering together in little companies, to light beacons on the hilltops and to celebrate far into the morning with feasting and dancing. In Livonia there is but little night in midsummer, and here the peasants hold their revel at midnight, lighting great fires on hilltops that flare their signal to others lighted on hill crests for miles about. Under the glare the peasants gather. They challenge one another to sing. With torches they light the topmost branches of birch trees that set up higher beacons than any in the countryside. When the dancing is over great feasts are held, and when morning comes the crowds go singing to their homes.

Beautiful Night Flower.

The most glorious of all the night-blooming flowers common to the garden is the moonflower, a climber. The blossoms, each like a mammoth saucer, are produced in great numbers and unfold their tightly twisted petals in late afternoon, even before darkness falls. It is a delightful experience to watch them open, for the transformation is effected so rapidly that a change from a tight bud to a full bloom flower takes place in a few moments. As the petals open, the sweetness of the flavor is thrown upon the air and attracts even from a long distance a night-flying moth, the only creature which is able to reach the bottom of the deep cup wherein the nectar is secreted. This moth has a tongue which rolls up like a spring, and when it is uncoiled measures six inches. Other insects may search for the sweets which the flower contains, but this one alone is provided with a tongue which can find it.—Christian Science Monitor.

The Older Authors.

The greater part of our modern literature bears evident marks of the haste which characterizes all the movements of this age; but in reading these older authors we are impressed with the idea that they enjoyed the most comfortable leisure. Many books we can read in a railroad car and feel a harmony between the rushing of the train and the haste of the author but to enjoy the older authors we need the quiet of a winter evening—an easy chair before a cheerful fire, and all the equanimity we can command. Then the genial good nature, the rich fullness, the persuasive eloquence of those old masters will fall upon us like the warm, glad sunshine. The pages of friendly old Goldsmith come to us like a golden autumn day, when every object which meets the eye bears all the impress of the completed year and the beauties of an autumnal forest.—James A. Garfield.

Life's Various Windows.

Through one of life's windows we view the broad fields of literature. Its various forms and multitudinous content present a surging mass hard to interpret. But once learn to follow with the mental eye the threads woven into life's intricate web and new worlds come within the range of vision. Like stages peopled with actors literature reveals the hopes and disappointments, the inspirations and the despondencies of myriad lives. And when we see through the window we wonder how it is so few learn to enjoy the varied scenes constantly passing and piping for eyes to see. As we see the rewards and punishments of those before us we profit and wish for still greater view from life's window.—Exchange.

Scott Loved by Animals.

There was something almost uncanny about Sir Walter Scott's power to attract and hold in friendship both man and beast. Lockhart, in his biography of the famous author of "Lady of the Lake," tells about a little pig which had taken "a most sentimental attachment to Scott and was constantly urging its pretensions to be admitted a regular member of his hall along with the greyhounds and terriers." "One summer," writes Lockhart, "Sir Walter suffered the same sort of pertinacity on the part of an affectionate hen." And he goes on to tell of a couple of donkeys which left pastures to lay their noses over the paling whenever the lord approached.

Daysman.

Daysman is an old and peculiar term for an umpire, one empowered by mutual consent to argue and decide a cause between two parties. It has been suggested that one was called a daysman because his presence was required in court at the day appointed. Edmund Spenser, who lived in the reign of Queen Elizabeth, uses the word in the sense of umpire or arbitrator, but he spells it dayesman. The translators of our authorized version of the Bible use the word in this sense in Job 9:33—"Neither is there any daysman between us, that might lay his hand upon us both."
